Montrose Shop,

Dear Sirs: I find after careful observation, and minute scrutiny, that the class and minute scrating, that the base of store you are conducting is about ten years too soon for this part of the United States. You have got to change the atmosphere of your husiness—change the quality of your merchandise and the ity of your merchandise and the quality of your service.

Ity atmosphere I mean that you and your salesfolk are almost too pointe—you are not on Fifth avenue. New York.

The quality of merchandise you carry is altogether unsuited for any community excepting for a city like Paris or New York. You can stock your store with good factory-made articles, at every-day prices, and the people will be satisfied. The very small percentage of the people who love art, and the finer grades of merchandise, will not do their purchasing due, will not do their purchasing in their own small community. The ulterior attractions of the arger cities will draw their patronage—the theaters, the concerts, the boulevards, etc. They demand the stamp of the metropolis on all their purchases—be they jewelry, clothing or pleasures, Your interior is by all means unsuited for a jewelry store. So I would advise tearing out your en-tire fittings and installing a plain, but somewhat ordinary

You will agree with me that the

SHADOW MAN'S OLD ALIBI FAILED TO DECEIVE WIFE

CHICAGO, Ill., April 2.—When Lloyd Carey came trotting home a littule late did he stop before entering the house and try to decide on an air-tight alibi? No eires. Not he just walked brickly into the house, greeted the wife with a smile and been working very hard tonight, dear. Been shadowing a bad, bad

Carey is a private detective and this explanation satisfied Mrs. Cares for a while, but in time she filed suit for divorce. "He got away with that althi for a long time," she told Judgs Fry, "but he can't fool me any Why, Judge, I am a shodow man or a private detective and my wife has nagged at me until I'm always in shape for the part, worn to a shadow." explained Carey with a hopeful twinkle in his eye.

The joke didn't get across. Judge

Fry continued the case and in the meantime Carey must pay his
